Having an option on a larger farm, I will offer to the highest bidder at 11 o'clock; a. m., in front of the court house door, on one of the very best farms in Bourbon County. It contains 108 acres of deep, rich Cane Ridge soil, the best in the world, about 5½ miles east of Paris, Ky., on the Cane Ridge turnpike. There is no waste land on it, and no rocks and every foot of it is good, strong, hemp and tobacco land. The improvements consist of a good 6-room house, a tenant house, one of the best tobacco barns in the county, and all necessary out-buildings. There are two ponds now full of water, a never-failing spring on the farm, and two good cisterns in the yard. A large bearing orchard full of apples, peaches, pears and cherries. There are two mails daily at the door, and a splendid district school near by, while old historic Cane Ridge Church is a short distance away. Terms to suit purchasers.

Monday, December 5, 1904,

If not sold, I will rent it to the highest bidder for one year. There will be 25 acres for hemp, 25 acres for corn and 8 to 10 acres for tobacco, balance in grass.

Young Girls on the Street.

The following from the Ashland Independent is as applicable to every other town in the State: "Young girls with trim little tailored suits and natty hats, with snooded hair and fresh, round faces, who ought to be at home with mother and father, are to be seen upon the streets of Ashland without escort or in groups of twos and threes at hours long past curfew time on any night of the week. There is something in the round faces that grips a little at the heart, however, and there's too often a swagger to the light-footed walk that seems out of harmony with sweet girlhood.

"There's a quick retort and a flip-pant jest from lips that should be repeating the multiplication table at home, and a bold glance or brazen stare from eyes that should be veiled in maiden modesty. Poor little girls, not to know how much more precious than all things born they are, when they properly estimate their own worth and prize themselves at it! Victor Hugo once said that he was one of those who 'fall speechless in the presence of young girls and flowers,' deeming them holy. And still they come to be unprized by themselves, neglected by their proper protectors and taken at their own estimate by the world.

"And it isn't their fault. Most of them have fathers and mothers who can tell them of the pitfalls that lie in the path of vanity and disobedience. Most of them have homes that should be their shelter after the sun goes down, and most of them would listen to advice properly given—and in time. The mother and father who think their duty done in sending the young daughter out to school dressed as well as the neighbor's little girl will have a lot to answer for some day."

That Throbbing Headache.

Would quickly leave you if you used Dr. King's New Life Pills. Thousands of sufferers have proved their matchless merit for sick and nervous headaches. They make pure blood and build up your health. Only 25c. money back if not cured. Sold by Oberdorfer, the druggist. 1jan

December Weather.

A Cincinnati weather prophet of note predicts that December will be a month of storms. Sudden changes in temperature will occur during the month from mild weather to severe cold waves in all sections of the country, and from heavy rains to sleet and snowstorms. The precipitation during December will consist principally of heavy rains turning to sleet and snow, followed by cold waves. Heavy rains over the Southern and Gulf States and Gulf States and coasts, causing big rises in all streams over the South. The rains followed by fall in temperature and cold waves, sleet and snow in many sections. Heavy rains followed by cold waves and at times sleet and snow over the States of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, and rain to heavy snow over the mountain districts of Virginia and Pennsylvania causing big rises in the rivers and danger of floods.

Epidemic of Pneumonia.

Levi Carter, colored, of near Glenkenney, died Tuesday night of pneumonia and five other members of his family are down with the same disease. Two of his sons were taken to a hospital in Lexington yesterday. The disease seems to be contagious as a number of others who called to see Carter are now seriously ill. There are also quite a number of cases of pneumonia in this city.

MARRIAGES.

—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ardery, of Millersburg, announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary D., to Homer G. Evans, of Cynthiana, on December 22.

BIRTHS.

—On yesterday afternoon to the wife of Frank Collier, of Tarr Station, a son.

It is going to rain next week so the weather prophet says, so come to-day and pick your X-mas presents.

J. T. HINTON.

AMUSEMENTS.

—The long-lived and remarkable melodrama, "The Span of Life," will be presented at the Paris Grand tonight. The author, Mr. Sutton Vane, has written many successful plays, including "The Cotton King" and "Humanity," but none have achieved as lasting success as "The Span of Life." Whether this is on account of its excellent presentation, its interesting story or its unique and marvelous mechanical effects, or human bridge, is difficult to determine. The famous Donazettas are with the production. Prices, 25, 35, 50 and 75 cents.

—The most successful of the modern musical comedies will be seen at the Paris Grand, when Pixley and Ladders' great work, "The Burgomaster," will be the attraction. This merry masterpiece has had longer runs in the larger cities than any other musical comedy in the country. The reason for the success of the piece is not far to seek. In the first place the music is extremely tuneful, and there are half a dozen airs that the auditor can carry away with him and whistle with satisfaction to himself. The book is really witty.

The cast this year is a notable one. It is headed by Oscar L. Figman as "The Burgomaster," Olga von Hatzfeldt is the "Willie," and has made great success in the character. Figman has been featured as "The Burgomaster" for two seasons, and is said to be the best Burgomaster that has yet appeared in the part. Others in the large cast are Charles Sharp, Oscar B. Ragland, Fred Bailey, R. J. Moye, Geo. McKissock, Louise Brackett, Harriett Sheldon, Dorothy Rae, Mae Franklin and the Sisters Lockhart. The chorus is an unusually large one, and has been selected for vocal ability, as well as for its good looks. The production is the most elaborate "The Burgomaster" has ever had, and the costumes are all new.

—On Tuesday, December 6, the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, with Frank van der Stucken as conductor, will appear at the Lexington Opera House under the auspices of the Lexington Oratorio Society. The matinee at 2:30 will be a Symphony Concert and the program in the evening will be the orchestra with the Oratorio of seventy-five voices, with Oscar Ehrgott as director. Tickets for sale by Miss Nell Whaley.

A FIERCE CHARGE.

Japanese Capture 203 Meter Hill at Port Arthur.

The Japs Are Falling Back Below Sintersin, Where For Several Days They Apparently Attempted a Turning Movement.

Tokio, Dec. 1.—The imperial army headquarters announces that the Japanese troops besieging Port Arthur are in possession of 203 Meter Hill. The following dispatch has been given out: "The army commenced a bombardment against 203 Meter Hill at dawn November 30 and made several charges before 4 in the afternoon. Owing to the enemy's stubborn resistance the charges failed. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon our force advanced against the southeastern portion of the hill, made a fierce charge and reached within 30 meters of the summit. At 7 o'clock with reinforcements we charged to the top which was occupied by our forces. Against the northwestern part of the hill we also charged, and at 8 o'clock the entire fort on the summit fell into our hands."

St. Petersburg, Dec. 1.—Official and private dispatches received here Wednesday night indicate that the Japanese are falling back below Sintersin, where, for several days, they had apparently been attempting a turning movement. After four days of tolerably severe but unsuccessful fighting they are now retiring with the Russians in pursuit. It is impossible as yet to tell whether either movement has real strategic significance.

The Russian consul at Chfoo telegraphs that the Japanese captured two forts in the storming operations against Port Arthur on November 29, but the news is not confirmed from any other quarter. The consul says the Japanese losses were enormous and that 5,000 men were sacrificed in two hours.

Russian Headquarters, Mukden, Dec. 1.—Quiet generally prevails along the front. The most important problem now is the supply of fuel and forage, but a commission which has been formed is taking energetic steps to keep up the supply of both these necessities.

RUSSIA UNWILLING.

Will Not Join in Peace Conference Until the End of the War.

Washington, Dec. 1.—Russia is unwilling to join the powers in a second peace conference at The Hague until her war with Japan is ended.

The Russian reply to Secretary Hay's circular note to the powers of October 23 last inviting them in the name of the president to reassemble in conference at The Hague "to complete the postponed work of the first conference" was delivered verbally to Secretary Hay Wednesday by Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador. The ambassador was requested by his government to say that Russia heartily accepted in principle the invitation to a second conference at The Hague and gladly associated himself with the American government in its effort to complete the mission of the first great assembly convened under the leadership of the Russian emperor.

The ambassador was further requested to say that while the Russian government very sincerely cherished these views, it did not consider the moment opportune for the convening of such a conference, and it therefore must withhold its formal acceptance of the invitation until the war in the far east was at an end.

Called on the President.

Washington, Dec. 1.—James S. White, of Omaha, Neb., who was a neighboring rancher of President Roosevelt in 1885 when the latter lived on his ranch at Medora, N. D., called on the president. The president recalled his face at once.

Adm. Chas. H. Davis Selected.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The president announced Wednesday that Rr. Adm. Charles H. Davis will be offered the appointment on the court of inquiry regarding the North Sea controversy between England and Russia.

AERONAUT MISSING.

Believed to Have Been Smothered or Frozen to Death in His Balloon.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—Peter Nissen is believed to have either smothered or frozen to death in his rolling balloon "Fool Killer No. 3," in which he started for a trip across the lake Tuesday. The opinion that Nissen was lost became general Wednesday afternoon when it was found that after 24 hours of silence there was still absolutely no word from the inventor who some years ago shot the whirlpool rapids of Niagara Falls in a barrel. He has not been sighted by any vessel. He has not, so far as reported, drifted ashore at any point. His relatives have heard nothing.

Possibility of Nissen's smothering to death was considered more definitely when it was learned that his only supply of air was that pumped into the Fool Killer before the craft was launched. It was said by Nissen's brothers, however, that the navigator had computed his air supply carefully and figured that it would last him for a great number of hours.

At the weather bureau it was said that even if Nissen reached shore he would suffer from the cold, as there was a snow storm blowing near the Michigan shore, and that as his boat had no means of heating and permitted of no air, the navigator would suffer severely. The wind toward midnight increased from 25 miles an hour to a 48-mile gale.

SECRETARY OF WAR TAFT.

A Dinner Given Him at the American Legation in Panama.

Panama, Dec. 1.—Secretary of War Taft, who is here for the purpose of effecting a settlement of the differences between Panama and the canal commission, received the Panama proposition in writing late Wednesday afternoon and may make his reply Thursday. The negotiations between Secretary Taft and the government are being conducted in secret, and no details as to their nature will be made public until an agreement is reached.

Secretary Taft was given a dinner Wednesday evening at the American legation.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

The Board of Control Is Purchasing Municipal Bonds.

Richmond, Ind., Dec. 1.—Charles E. Shiveley, of this city, supreme chancellor of the Knights of Pythias of the World, in a bulletin issued Wednesday says:

Under the provisions of the law as passed by the late session of the supreme convention the board of control has purchased municipal bonds to the amount of $527,500, earning an average of about 4.25 per cent. These bonds have been selected with the utmost care and the earnings of the surplus funds of the endowment rank have been materially increased.

INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION.

David M. Parry, of Indianapolis, Re-Elected as President.

New York, Dec. 1.—On the report of the nominating committee, David M. Parry, of Indianapolis, was re-elected president of the Citizens' Industrial association. Judge C. C. Craig, of Denver, was elected first vice president; James T. Hoile, of Brooklyn, second vice president; George A. Davis, of Grand Rapids, Mich., third vice president; Maj. A. C. Rosecranz, of Evansville, Ind., treasurer.

USED MAILS TO DEFAUD.

Three Men Were Sentenced to Prison at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Dec. 1.—H. Allen Bradford, A. J. Frank and J. B. Bradford were sentenced to terms of 18, 9 and 6 months, respectively, Wednesday in the United States district court, after having been convicted on charges of using the mails to defraud. Post office inspectors state that they are the last of an organization of lawyers who have been selling land to which they have no title. The other members of the organization have been convicted and sentenced.

JUBILEE DINNER.

Seven Hundred Republicans Met at the Waldorf-Astoria.

New York, Dec. 1.—Seven hundred republicans attended the jubilee dinner given Wednesday night at the Waldorf-Astoria in honor of the victory of President Roosevelt and Vice President-elect Fairbanks. President Roosevelt sent his regrets as did also George B. Cortelyou, chairman of the national convention.

Appealed to the President.

Pittsburg, Dec. 1.—An appeal will be made to President Roosevelt to use his good offices to bring about a settlement of the strike at Youngstown and Girard. The president has consented to hold a conference with President Shaffer.

The Arbitration Treaties.

Washington, Dec. 1.—That the ratification by the senate of the arbitration treaties recently signed and of those now being negotiated may be expedited, the state department is endeavoring to have all treaties identical in form.

Will Hold Annual Reunions.

St. Louis, Dec. 1.—At the final meeting of the Executive World's Fair Commissioners association in the Oklahoma building at the World's fair, Wednesday, it was decided to hold annual reunions.

Editors Ill.

The newspaper fraternity of Maysville is indeed traveling in hard lines this year, from a health standpoint. The situation, perhaps, is not equaled in any other city of the same population in the United States.

Colonel George Rosser, senior proprietor of the Bulletin has been ill for more than a year.

Mr. Thomas A. Davis, editor and proprietor of the Ledger, has also been in poor health for a similar period.

Editor M. F. Marsh, of the Bulletin, has been in declining health for about a year. His friends noticed it, but hesitated to speak of the matter, and he continued to work until he was compelled to give up more than three months ago.

Residence Burned and Boy Cremated.

The residence of Ben and Jesse Morgan, farmers, living about a mile and a half from North Middletown, this county, together with all household furnishings, including all wearing apparel belonging to the two families, was entirely destroyed by fire at an early hour Tuesday morning.

The building was ignited from a defective flue and the fire had gained great headway when discovered, the occupants barely having time to escape, clad only in their sleeping garments.

It was thought every member of the two families had made good their escape, but upon investigation, it was ascertained that Ben, the 13-year-old son of John Morgan, was missing. The father, although the entire upper story of the house was in flames, rushed frantically into the burning building to arouse and rescue his son. Seeing his bed was vacant, the father retreated and assured the other members of the families, who were now wild with grief that his boy was out and safe, but still the boy could not be found.

The flames leaped higher and higher and the heat became intense, forcing the family back from where they stood, helpless witnesses to the destruction of all their earthly possessions. Soon the flames had spent their force, and the building which only a few hours before was the happy home of two families, wherein all slept soundly, was now a mass of ashes and cinders. But still the boy could not be found. Had he perished in the devouring flames was asked by every one present. The agonizing grief of father and mother seemed unbearable and willing hands began to investigate, and his charred remains were found under the embers of the kitchen table. It is thought that when the boy entered the kitchen in his effort to escape he was suffocated from the intense smoke that filled this room.

The families have the sympathy of the entire community in their irreparable loss. Both families are poor but industrious farmers, and the good citizens of that community are rendering every aid possible to relieve their suffering and distress.

Henry, the 9-year-old son of Jesse Morgan, was seriously but not fatally burned.

Court House Progressing.

A News man yesterday interviewed Superintendent Minter and Squire Ball in regard to the progress of the building of the court house and was informed in substance as follows:

The court house is progressing nicely—in fact it is being rushed more just now than ever before. The plumbing work has been completed, the roof is receiving the finishing coat of crushed granite, part of the copper has been placed on the dome and the rest is here and is ready to be placed in position, a little delay is being occasioned by the non-arrival of the galvanized clock face which is necessary to be placed in position before work can be completed on that portion of the building.

The parties having the contract for placing in the stairways and pointing up the stone work on the outside are busy at work.

The surplus stone timber and other material that was left over is being sorted and offered for sale. After this has been disposed of the grading on the yard will be commenced.

All of the parties concerned in the building of the structure are pleased at the progress that is being made and say that the new court house will no doubt be ready for occupancy by July or August.

THE DOG THAT NEVER WAS.

"Tell a story, father dear,"
Said Helen to me one day;
And climbing my knee she cuddled down
In her own delightful way.

So I made up a story, as best I could,
Of a house in a peaceful vale,
A boy named John and a little white dog—
A dog with a curly tail.

It was my undoting, for Helen dear
Fell in love with the dog right then,
And now each time that she greets me
I must tell of the dog again.

Surely no doggie was ever born
That had such a wild career,
That got in so many scraps and fights,
And conjured such joy or fear.

As a puppy he fell in the pail of milk,
And I fancy I hear him yell
When he switched his tail in the hot grape juice.

Or, the jelly that would not "jell."

The Shanghai rooster had thrashed him twice,
He's been butted by the ram,
His nose has been full of hedgehog quills,
And his toes pinched by a clam.

Once he was lost in a woodchuck's hole,
And once in a hollow tree
Where he found the honey, and also found
That a dog shouldn't try to bee.

He has battled polecats and fought with dogs,
Been tossed by the brindle bull,
Kicked by the mare and stoned by tramps,
Till his cup of woe was full.

But then he has done such noble deeds—
Has rounded the frightened sheep,
And once found a little lost baby girl
In the swamp, where she fell asleep.

And the more adventures that Carlo has,
The more must papa invent,
Till my mind is a very dog kennel of tales
And my fancy warped and bent.

Often I wish that my Helen's love
For the little white dog might pale,
But I haven't the courage to kill that dog—
The dog with the curly tail.

"Col. Howe," said Gen. Wolfe, addressing an officer of the light infantry, who appeared at the head of his men, "after you have mustered your battalion will you explain to them that I have designated them to lead the way in the attack to-night? Choose a forlorn hope of 24 men to scale the heights, sir."

"Tis an honor indeed, sir, I thank you," answered the young officer, smiling with pleasure. "I myself will lead them."

"I expected as much of you, Capt. Grafton," he said, turning to the sailor and resuming the formal method of public address, "will you see that your flotilla of boats is ready to receive my men?"

"I know it is, sir, but I will look again," answered Grafton. "Capt. Rous, may I take Lieut. Hatfield in my boat to assist me?"

"Certainly," answered Rous, a veteran sailor.

Followed by the delighted officer, Grafton sprang to the gangway and called for his gig. Meanwhile Howe was addressing the light infantry. When he called for volunteers every man responded, and it was difficult to make selection of the required number. Presently, upon Grafton's assurance that all was ready, the men slowly filed down over the side and took their places in the boats. Taking his own boat the captain rowed from ship to ship, finding that all preparations had been made everywhere, and that boats filled with men and manned by stout seamen were already clustered under the lee of the ships where they could be screened from the observation of the French at Cap-Rouge.

By 12 o'clock, midnight, the embarkation had been completed, and as it was nearing the end of the flood the boats slowly put off from the ships and headed for Cap-Rouge, Gen. Monckton being in charge and Wolfe remaining on the Sutherland for the present.

The flotilla approached close enough to Cap-Rouge thoroughly to awaken the attention of the troops of Bougainville, who sprang to their arms in expectation of the threatening attack. But the advance was stopped before they were near enough to engage. After some little maneuvering off the shore, the boats, as if deterred by the promptness of the French soldiery, rowed back to the ships and sheltered themselves under the lee of their broadsides again where they could not be seen. Once there, the men, without going aboard the ships, waited patiently for the turning of the tide.

At four bells in the mid-watch, or two o'clock on the morning of the 13th, Wolfe entered the heavy cutter which Grafton had exchanged for his gig, and gave the signal to shove off. Following the general's boat came the boats of the light infantry, and after them the rest of the flotilla.

It was darker than ever. The sky was filled with light fleecy clouds drifting rapidly across the stars, their wild motion, driven as they were by some upper current of air, only accentuating the stillness on the water. Hugging the opposite shore for a time the boats floated silently down the river with the young ebb. As they appeared to be unnoticed from the camp at Cap-Rouge and as their maneuvers excited no attention, oars were broken out and the boats crossed to the Quebec side. The seamen rowing gently as they passed rapidly down the river.

Presently the boats swept around a huge headland jutting out into the stream. Below the headland lay a little cove. The current shot swiftly about the promontory and swept around the little bay. The boats were carried below the landing-place and it took some hard pulling before their stems touched the shore.

Wolfe had gone forward in the cutter, and the others drawing back to give him passage, he was the first man to set foot upon the muddy shore. It was four o'clock now. They could hear eight bells chiming faintly across the hills. Around them in the shadow it was as still as death—that most silent hour before the day breaks. A gentle breeze had sprung up and was sighing softly through the trees at the top of the cliff; the sky was overcast; they would have rain presently.

About 200 feet away, since it was low tide, the bluffs rose precipitously from the level beach. There was room at their base to disembark the whole army. After Wolfe and the officers, including Grafton, had landed, the light infantry noiselessly clambered out of the boats and advanced toward the foot of the cliffs.

A zigzag path, up which a single file of men might with difficulty make its way, broke the sheer face of the cliff. It had been barricaded with heavy timbers and was at present unscalable.

There was a momentary pause. It seemed as if the whole enterprise, so brilliantly conceived and so successfully carried out hitherto, would be blocked by this unfortunate obstacle. They had succeeded in landing unobserved, but if they attempted to tear down the barricade they would inevitably attract the attention of the negligent defenders at the top of the path. Under such circumstances the attempt would have to be given over. As Wolfe had said, 100 men might hold that towering cliff against an army.

"I think we can scramble up the cliff by the aid of these trees," said Howe at last.

It was a bold proposition. Wolfe looked at him gratefully and approvingly. It was their only chance, and the young general gave the signal for the attempt in these not very encouraging words:

"You may try it, Col. Howe, but I do not think you will succeed. Captain," he added, turning to one of his staff, "tell Gen. Monckton to keep the rest of the men quiet in the boats for a few moments. We may have no need for them."

As he spoke Howe and his gallant 24 sprang at the cliff. They were soon lost in the shadow covering the face of it, and the watchers below could trace the course of their slow and painful ascent by the crashing sounds they made, as by the aid of stunted trees growing in clumps here and there they made their toilsome way upward. Why the French did not discover them has never been explained.

Presently the sounds died away altogether. The silence was broken by the sound of a musket-shot, followed by another and another. A quick fusillade rang out from the sky above them. They were there, then! They were engaged! What had been the issue?

Concealment was no longer possible or desirable. At a word from their commander the men on shore sprang at the barricades. The scene changed from one of absolute quiet to intense activity.

"Have they won, think you?" asked Grafton.

"We shall know in a moment," answered Wolfe. "If they have lost, somebody will come tumbling down the cliff to tell the tale. Meanwhile, I am staking all on the chance of their success."

The little cove was now filled with noise. Catching the contagion the men began to spring from the boats and fell in on the shore. The feelings of the soldiers, repressed so long through the night, found vent in cheers and cries. Presently a hail came down from the cliff. It was Howe's voice.

"We have the post!" he shouted. "The enemy has fled! The way is open!"

"Hold it at all hazards!" cried the commander.

The cheering men fairly tore the barricades to pieces and scrambled up the path, Wolfe himself in the lead. Capt. de Vergor, who commanded the French guard, was incapable and a coward. He had kept negligent watch. Howe and his handful of men had surprised them. The fall of New France must be laid at the feet of one person; and, singularly enough, the beginning of American independence may be traced to the splendid exploit of the young soldier, who, as a general long after, at Long Island, White Plains, Brandywine and Germantown did his best to stop its course.

CHAPTER XI.

ON THE ROOF OF THE WORLD.

IT was ten o'clock in the morning. Every available English soldier had been landed on the Quebec side and had scrambled up the cliffs to the Plains of Abraham. The hours intervening since the first attack had not been idle ones. French batteries erected at Samos and Sillery, not far distant, and on either side of the cove, had been gallantly taken by assault, and scouting parties had cleared the adjacent country of stragglers. The sailors under Grafton by herculean endeavor had drawn two six-pounders to the crest of the plateau. Since eight o'clock in the morning these two guns, excellently served by the seamen, had been replying to a heavy fire from the three larger guns of the French, who had begun assembling as early as six o'clock on the hill beyond the English position.

From the covert afforded by the trees and underbrush on the side of the St. Charles river valley, as well as on the St. Lawrence edge, Indian and backwoods sharpshooters had been pouring a gallant rifle fire upon the English, to which no effective reply could be made. The thin red line of soldiers that had so often stood between humanity's progress and the armed world in opposition, keeping open the pathway of the future, was drawn up in three ranks. The lines were not long enough to reach across the plateau, and the left flank, where Townshend commanded, was refused—drawn back at a right angle from the battle front.

Col. Burton, with the light infantry, was held in reserve to anticipate a possible attack from Bougainville. That worthy officer, however, knew nothing of the landing and remained quietly in camp at Cap-Rouge, expecting the return of the British ships with the changing tide. The sky was overcast, and fitful showers, light in character and brief in duration, besprinkled the sod, soon to be wetted by a liquid substance of greater consistence and more ominous color.

The two armies were about equal in number. The qualities of the French regulars were as high as those of the British army, but the average of the French forces was sadly diminished by the fact that the larger portion of their army was made up of Canadian militia. These hardy peasants were excellent fighters in regular service, but poor material indeed with which to face regular troops in the open.

But Montcalm had been hasty. He might have waited longer, until Bougainville with his excellent division had joined him, or at least reached a position from which he could support the French attack by a demonstration in force in the rear of the English. Fight the French must, of course, or starve, but they would not have starved in a few hours, and a few hours might have materially changed the situation. There were battery after battery of field pieces back in Quebec which should have been dispatched to Montcalm's assistance. His repeated and most pressing requests to de Ramesay, the commander, had only brought three guns to him, and the cowardly de Vaudreuil, the governor of the province, was holding at Beauport thousands of men idle in their intrenchments, who should have been dispatched to his assistance.

How explain the Frenchman's reckless haste? The fact was that Montcalm had always beaten the English. He had never in his whole career met a single commander among them who appeared to have the slightest military genius, and he made the fatal mistake of despising his foes. Perhaps the fact that they lay there stubbornly taking the galling skirmish fire from the coverts on either flank so silently, in spite of its ghastly effectiveness, replying only to his heavier guns with their two six-pounders, gave him greater confidence; at any rate, at ten in the morning he ordered an advance.

With feverish impatience the English held themselves in restraint under the peremptory orders of their commander. As Wolfe saw the French rising on the crest of the hill, giving evidence of their intention to join battle in close encounter, he walked rapidly up and down his own line speaking those simple, hearty words of encouragement, as he passed by his soldiery, which do much to make a man a hero. A quiver of delight ran through the compact ranks. With fierce pleasure the men looked to their pieces and made themselves ready.

Suddenly the crest of the slope in front of them was tipped with flame and covered with smoke. The rattle of arms crashed over the field. Bullets rang through the morning air. Men were dropping here and there among the ranks of the stolid British; some moaned and shrieked in the anguish of shattered limb or torn body, and some lay still and quiet in the grass, seeking little, minding nothing of the roar of battle about them. The French, after the first volley, began firing continuously and irregularly, still advancing.

Suddenly, when the cheering and yelling whitecoats had reached a point perhaps 100 yards away, a sharp command rang out in English. The officers repeated Wolfe's signal.

"Steady! Ready! Aim!"

Be quiet all, for now was the time! The muskets of the waiting red ranks came smartly down.

"Fire!"

The first rank delivered a volley which crashed over the plateau like cannon-shot. Their drill was magnificent. A moment of startling silence supervened and the second rank repeated the performance. Ere the echoes of the discharge had died away among the hills, the third rank sent its sheet of destruction in the face of the advancing men. The field was covered with thick smoke. The English could see nothing. For a moment no reply was made to them. Then a scattered fire, confessing weakness by its feebleness, ran along the French line. Again and again the deadly discharge of the English was poured out. The French seemed to be making no reply at all. Presently there was a slight respite and the smoke cleared away, revealing a horrid picture of carnage.

The crest of the hill was covered with bodies. Most of the horsemen were down. Montcalm and one or two officers were striving desperately to reform their men. The Canadian militia, unable to stand against such a fearful fire, had melted away. The French grenadiers, the white-coated regulars, were rallying in bewildered little knots here and there upon their officers. The French advance was completely barred. Now was the moment to strike.

"The picture?" said Wolfe to Grafton, who was standing by him. "You have it?"

"Here."

"Remember—and good-bye, old friend. Now, gentlemen," he cried, "let us go at them. Forward!"

Like a common soldier the young general, sword up, face smiling, put himself at the head of the Louisbourg grenadiers. The French had at last got into some sort of order, rallying in thin, broken, and exhausted lines. Their courage was superb. They saw death in the advancing mass of the British infantry, but they did not waver. The battle was lost to them; they would strike another blow at any rate.

It was the English who cheered now, the French had passed the cheering stage. This time it was they who poured their volleys into the advancing British. The execution done among them was fearful. A bullet shattered the wrist of the general. He caught a handkerchief about it and pressed on. A second shot hit him, but still he did not falter. A third bullet struck him full in the breast; he staggered a moment and fell. With a fierce yell for revenge his army swept by him. A last volley from the French and bayonets crossed in the smoke.

Wolfe, in the rear of the line, was down and dying. It needed no surgeon to translate the look of death upon his face. Grafton knelt by him and took his hand, tears streaming down his face. The path of glory was indeed ending here. Others quickly assembled where the soldier lay bleeding to death on the field.

"The battle," whispered the dying man. "Tell me?"

"They run! They run!" cried Grafton, rising and surveying the field.

Local Entertainment.

A newcomer from the metropolis, feeling sure that the people of the little mountain settlement in the Cumberland lands would be interested to know in advance the date of a certain event, asked permission to place the following clipping from his daily paper in the window of the little postoffice: "A total lunar eclipse will take place tomorrow between eight and nine p. m."

Not long after there was a knock at the door of his cottage near by. A half-grown girl stood there, industriously twisting the corner of her ragged apron.

"Please, sir," she began, hurriedly, "mother wants to know if it's to be in the chapel or the schoolhouse. And may I be doorkeeper? I kept it for the waxworks last year, and there didn't a soul get past me 'thout puttin' in!" —Youth's Companion.

Eased His Conscience.

A paragraph about Scotchmen in Russia recalls a very amusing incident which happened some years ago in the experience of a Scotchman who was touring in eastern Russia. He attended service in a Greek church and had his attention riveted by a gigantic attendant in the procession, who flourished as espee with great skill, uttering the while some words which seemed familiar to the tourist's ear. Listening intently, he made out the sentence to run: "It's jist pickie o' clean cauld water. If it does ye nae guid, it does ye nae harm." After the service he sought out the attendant, who took him into a side chamber and disclosed himself as a Dumfermline man who had wandered in many lands and had temporarily taken service with the local Greek priest.—London Chronicle.

Knew His Business.

A country vicar, who invited his flock once a year to supper in the school room, intrusted his handy man with the delivery of the invitation cards. A day or two before the function his reverence found the faithful fellow sitting by the roadside in an advanced state of hilarity.

"Good gracious, Jenkins, what does this mean?"

"I'm dud—dud—drunk, sir."

"So it seems. How did you get into this shocking state?"

"It's all along o' them cards, sir. I takes 'em round, and this 'un asks me to drink summat, an' that 'un asks me to drink summat, and so I gets like this."

"Why, this is terrible! Are there no temperance people in the parish?"

"Lor, yes, sir, lots o' 'em; but I send their cards by post!"—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

TIPS FOR THE TOILET.

Items of Information for the Guidance of Seekers After Health and Beauty.

The woman who asks about caring for her hair will have gained some knowledge if she remembers a few don'ts. Don't break your hair, nor irritate the scalp by using too many, or too heavy, hairpins. Don't use an iron on your hair any oftener than is necessary. Don't use too fine a comb upon your hair; it breaks it, snarls it, and is absolutely fatal to it. Don't use soda upon your hair; it dries it, coarsens it, and makes it split, says the Boston Post.

Cultivate air-hunger. We should learn to be as hungry for fresh air as we are naturally thirsty for pure water. The old-fashioned ideas concerning stuffy living or bedrooms are now, fortunately, out of date, and should never be revived.

A clear skin is one of the essentials of good health and beauty, and nothing conduces more to this end than frequent baths and brisk rubbings. They will do much to keep the skin soft and the whole body vigorous.

Are you always careful how the weight of your clothing is distributed? Have as much of it as possible suspended from the shoulders. Much energy needed for other purposes is expended in carrying about heavy clothes.

Either morning or night is the best time for a cold water bath, or even a tepid one, but a hot water bath should be taken just before retiring, inasmuch as it is relaxing. Never bathe just before or after a hearty meal. Bathe after, instead of before, exercising, and bathe regularly every day.

Alum and myrrh are both good for the gums.

Sugar is the most effective of all fat-producing agents.

Elder-flower water is cooling to the face, besides being a gentle skin tonic.

Wrinkles come from the relaxation of the facial muscles. Massage is the quickest and surest means of restoring the muscles to their normal condition.

The bristles of a toothbrush should not be too stiff; one in which the bristles are far apart is best, as such may be thoroughly cleaned.

The first step in physical culture is deep breathing.

FRESH NOVELTIES IN FUR.

Fashionable Articles of Apparel in Vogue for the Winter Season.

Speaking of fur novelties, this is what one sees, says the Brooklyn Eagle: Handsome squirrel coats that roll open, showing a vest of delicate embroidery.

Heavy sable coats and coats of mink with lay-down collars of Armenian needlework and cuffs of the same.

Baby lamb coats with vest of Persian embroidery and stock to match and deep cuffs of the Persian work.

Exquisite sealskin coats, buttoned with leather-covered buttons, and trimmed with leather cuffs and leather collar. When the coat is unbuttoned it shows a vest made of embroidered leather.

One sees beautiful fur coats of all kinds with embroidered camois vests and one sees handsome squirrel coats with embroidered camois facings. Strange contrasts rule the day in dress.

It is a fad to line a fur coat with satin to match the costume, and one of the prettiest winter suits to be found anywhere is made of Persian lamb trimmed with ermine and lined with gun metal satin to be worn over a gun metal cloth costume. The hat in this case can be a felt hat the color of gun metal trimmed with a band of ermine and a white ostrich feather which should trail over the back of the hat.

Several pretty features stand out prominently in the imported coats. The first is the leather covered button and the button covered with velvet. Green velvet buttons, as big as a silver quarter, trim a squirrel coat, and a coat of deerskin is adorned with big button molds covered with green leather. Of course the leather is dyed to a certain shade, and that shade is usually one that matches the hat. A little embroidered leather vest of the same color is an added touch of smartness. And one can have leather-trimmed cuffs and gloves stitched with green to match the vest, the buttons and the cuff trimmings.

Simmered Fowl.

No matter how tough or hopeless a fowl may seem, roast it first to give the meat a flavor. This must be done slowly and carefully, basting at frequent intervals. When it is nicely colored, split down the back and lay it flat in covered ham boiler. Pour in all the gravy from the roasting pan and rinse same well with an equal quantity of hot water. Add a liberal helping of canned tomatoes to gravy and dot the surface of the fowl here and there with tiny bits of onion. When these have become roasted, dredge with flour and keep up the basting through three or four hours of simmering. A fowl thus prepared will keep a week, and while it tastes delicious cold, does not betray the least "warmed-over" taste when heated through. It should be kept covered and allowed to remain in the pot in which it was cooked without being removed from the gravy, to which a little hot water may be added when required.—Housekeeper.

To Keep Fall Fruits.

Grapes, pears and a number of fall fruits can be kept for winter use very nicely by packing them in sawdust. Of course, wipe them off carefully with dry, soft cloths, taking only the fruit that has just turned and not any that is dead ripe. The sawdust should completely cover every particle of the fruit so that the air is entirely shut out.—Boston Budget.

THE SONG.

From out of the silence there comes to me
The sound of a soothing song,
A faint and a fading minstrelsy,
I have waited to hear so long.

Nor high is the melody I hear,
Nor pompous the pleasing strain,
But sweet as a lute on my waiting ear,
With a sweetness akin to pain.

Not a strain of an opera known to fame,
No passionate and pulsing cry;
No voice that arises like a flame
In a triumph clear and high.

But a simple and soothing lullaby
That causes my heart to rejoice;
A melody soft as a summer sigh
And the sound of my mother's voice.

From out of the silence there comes to me
A song that is full of joy,
A dear and a darling minstrelsy
I heard when I was a boy.

The veil of the past at the sound of the song
Is suddenly torn apart,
And memories come in a shadowy throng
To soften my hardened heart.

It is only a haunting lullaby,
The ghost of a song, that's all,
Yet it rouses the tenderest sigh
And causes my tears to fall.

It comes like a song in the midst of a dream,
Too tenderly sweet to last,
As light as the lilt of a murmuring stream,
An echo from out the past.

From out of the silence there comes to me
The sound of a soothing song,
A faint and a fading minstrelsy
I have waited to hear so long.

Laughter
Amid Tears

By MARGARET J. GATES

THE car was almost due at the summit of the Gorgegrat. The chill air from the glacier fields pressed a stimulating finger on the pulses. The ice of the surrounding glaciers was dull green and deep.

The Little Traveler, wound to the neck in a thick plaid shawl, stood waiting with her aunt. They were going down on the last car which made the trip that day. They had wished to spend the night on the top, for Elizabeth, the captain of this brief summer outing, had but to give the orders and Die Tante obeyed like a soldier.

But, alas, the money was lacking. They had added once and again the columns in their account book, and the result came ever the same, with the tiresome inflexibility of mathematics. The two hungry sightseers were at last enjoying Switzerland after months of longing. But their rule must be kept—so many marks a day, and prices at the tip-top houses have all the rarity of the altitude where they flourish. So this pleasure must be given up.

"For once I am almost satisfied," sighed Elizabeth. "It would be too glorious to see a sunrise here, too. We must be content with our half-loaf."

The electric car came slowly creeping up the steel way, bringing noise, a disturbing element, a taste of modern improvement, into these silent heights.

Elizabeth's green touring hat bore a puff of feathers on a quivering wire. Each time they trembled, if you cared for Elizabeth you must look to see if she, too, trembled. "One look, dear aunt, one long look to fix this picture in my mind. How dull the four walls and the sewing will be after this feast of ice and snow. Just see how clear the air is, and how near the other peaks look. I am going to that rock to look at the Matterhorn. There is time to spare. The car is not up yet, and it waits before going down again. Come."

The rose color of the afterglow on snowy summits defies the common sense. Even the solid fields of white, sloping down the channels between soaring peaks, these have a chilled sorcery of their own. Imprint the scene on your mind, Elizabeth. It will always stay. It is, as you say, so hauntingly beautiful and remote.

The dependence, the finiteness of daily life is the chain by which the spiritual delights must be confined. And no joy is sufficient to itself, even observation of the Gorgegrat panorama. The little Swiss watch, a delicate toy, the price of which had shortened the pleasure trip two weeks, the watch pinned on Elizabeth's breast, continued ticking and ticking, leading time captive, and leading Elizabeth and her aunt from the rock with its mighty outlook back to the little station. The car stood ready for the descent, with perhaps a 30 seconds to spare.

The morning of the same day George Werner, a young student, had arrived at Zermatt. His face was long by nature, and now it was long from fatigue—and what else? Perhaps it was fatigue alone. He was always jolly in conversation, therefore he must be always happy. A smile came quickly to his face when he met a friend. When left alone it died quickly away. But always his interest in others was there.

Young blood must flow a little faster at seeing the noble view which is the heart's desire. George had dreamed of this hour, and now as he sat on the ascending car, here was reality. His reddish hair blew back from his temples, white from the confinement of study.

The summer was almost past, but near the summit there were no plants to mark the change of season by their brighter coloring. The stony bed of the new steel way was hardly adjusted, and barrenness ruled under foot.

But raise your eyes, George. There stand the monarchs of Switzerland. The eyes must be kept always open. He knows this, for when the lids shut quietly he sees many far-away things. Though the scenes shift, in each one is a figure buoyant with life and sometimes wearing a plaid shawl and an Alpine hat which shades the blue eyes beneath. In fact, the familiar eyes are so shaded that when George looks into them the vision always fades; he opens his own eyes and sighs himself back into the present moment.

Life would be quite another thing if he might allow himself these visions. But they come without leave, and must be put aside. The question which had often risen to his lips was not the one he might ask.

Having an invalid mother and no money, a student may say: "Will you pass me the bread?" while his glances speak many gentle courtesies. But he may not say: "Will you share my bread?" when there is hardly enough for the mother.

Therefore sunshine is brightest when the eyelids curtain the eyes. Yet is a vision of fair possibilities not half as real as the rain against the window.

The car had arrived at the top. George stood on the station platform, contemplative. Before the pleasure of walking to the very summit he would watch the car go down again. When it should descend under the great red sun, the Polyphemus eye of the mountain world, the last link with Zermatt would be severed for the night.

He stood with his back to a large rock. When he arrived he had noticed two figures seated on it, and had idly thought of them as chance companions on the summit over night.

The Lilliputian bustle of departure as the car was prepared for descending amused him. How different this adjustable and particular start from the hurried stoppages and confused crowd of a city car.

A belated passenger was loudly summoned by the conductor. "One moment," came the answer as two ladies passed George, hurrying toward the car. It was Die Tante, with Elizabeth. At the sound of the voice he knew who it was, and yet his eyes needed proof. As Elizabeth passed him he laid a hand on her arm. She turned and recognized him.

Surely the snow fields lend a strange and radiant light to the eyes which behold them. Perhaps Elizabeth had sat too long on the great rock.

"But the car is going—now," came from her in gasps as if she were answering some question.

Two other passengers were to go down. Happily they were quarreling over the disposition of their satchels. Die Tante had hurriedly attained a seat in the car and stood transfixed, a spirit of wonder at the unforeseen.

George found speech after several precious seconds had elapsed. He still kept his hand on Elizabeth's shawl where the blue stripes crossed the red one. The evening air from the glaciers was like wine.

"Elizabeth, the sunrise here will be so wonderful, so without compare," he eagerly said. Her advent had bewildered him. The reality was still part of his vision, and, like the sunrise, wonderful beyond compare.

The car started, with Elizabeth poised like a bird on the step. George grasped her hand to detain her.

"The beautiful mountain tops. We must see them together," he cried, as the wheels moved. Even while he spoke the car gained speed, and he walked quickly beside it.

Instinctively he pushed her firmly on to the platform of the car, for safety, but did not relinquish her hand. Die Tante stood ready to jump off in case of need. Voices called to them in warning as the car gathered such headway that George was obliged to run.

All their past meetings and partings were in the clasp of his hand, and he would not let go. His hat far behind, he followed, like Merlin, unreckoning, on the gleam, on the light from her eyes.

"Ah, love, I cannot," came from him without his wish.

Elizabeth bent towards him from the car. She had thought, thus far, only of the miracle of his presence. Now she realized that there was danger to face. For her to loose his hand was impossible, so firm was his hold.

For her to jump off—no. Yet if he were hurt! Never had his safety been so imperative.

There was no time to lose. "Get on, quick!" she called, loud enough to conquer the noise of wheels, and pulled him forward and up with all her strength.

George came suddenly to his senses. With a brave laugh and a firm foot, he challenged the gods and gained the platform.

The bunch of feathers on Elizabeth's green hat quivered like aspens as he drew himself up, still holding her hand. If you cared for her you must look to see if she, too, trembled.

After all, three can live on very little if the austere spirit of self-sacrifice walk among them, and the tender hand of a new daughter to smooth the pillows in the sick room is worth more than gold.—Boston Budget.

FOUR CHILDREN NECESSARY

College Professor Declares Each Family Must Have That Many to Perpetuate Race.

Speaking before the student assembly, Prof. Ross, of the University of Nebraska, said recently:

"To keep up the race every family should have four children. Of these four, it will be likely that one will die, and one will fail to marry or will go to the wars. Thus two only will be left to perpetuate the family.

"One of the chief reasons for the constant decrease in families is that people are constantly being borne away from the simple life. The American is esteemed for the dollars he can gather and spend. It is this, not caste, which strangles the birth rate.

"Why should it not be the ideal of every woman to raise a family? It should be counted the highest honor."

RENEW LIMITED MARRIAGE.

Turk and Wife Residing in St. Louis Again Married for a Period of Twenty-Five Years.

C. Anastassiu Dit Natalie, a Turk, and his wife, of St. Louis, closed their first term of a limited marriage contract the other day and entered into a second term by being reunited in Justice Campbell's court room. They had not heard of George Meredith and his plan, which set the world to talking recently, but they said the custom is recognized in the northern part of Africa and in parts of Turkey.

As residents of these regions they did not consider their first marriage, performed in Brussels, Belgium, as meaning "until death does part," but drew up an agreement for a limited term of 25 years, with the privilege of renewal.

The couple have one child, a daughter 12 years old, who was present when the renewal ceremony was performed. "My wife and I think as much of each other," said Natalie, "as when we were married 25 years ago, and I am certain that we will feel the same way 25 years hence, when we will again renew our vows."

MUST PAY ALIMONY FIRST.

Husbands Who Divorce Wives Granted Bare Living Only by Illinois Supreme Court.

The Illinois supreme court has decided that a man must exist on the bare necessities of life, if it becomes necessary, in order to make his full payments. Jennie Shaffner, the divorced wife of former commander of the navy militia of Illinois, B. M. Shaffner, of Chicago, accused him of failing to pay $80 a month alimony and of being $1,200 behind.

Shaffner declared his meager law practice and his poverty prevented him from making the payments. The supreme court says his statements of financial condition are not complete. The court says:

"He who seeks to establish the fact that his failure to pay is the result of the lack of funds must show with reasonable certainty the amount of money he has received and disbursements."

"The court decides that whatever he has left after meeting his barest living expenses must be applied to the alimony."

MARRIES HER MOTHER.

Youthful Lover Turns to Widow for Sympathy and Finally Makes Her a Bride Again.

When the famous marrying clergyman, Rev. John H. Prescott, of Sayville, L. I., united Mrs. Emma Baker, widow of Capt. Syms Baker of the United States, life-saving service, to Frank Green, a unique romance was disclosed.

The bride is 42 years of age, while her husband is 20 years her junior.

About a year ago Mr. Green began to pay marked attention to one of the pretty daughters of the sprightly widow.

Miss Baker, however, did not encourage him, and he became noticeably despondent and unhappy. In his sorrow he turned to his sweetheart's mother for consolation and sympathy.

Mrs. Baker was at first inclined to make light of her youthful lover's protestations, but he finally won her.

OFFICIAL CUP OF COFFEE.

Proper Method of Brewing the Beverage to Be Determined in Washington.

By direction of the secretary of agriculture the bureau of plant industry is to take up at once experiments to determine the best manner in which to brew a cup of coffee. To this end, says a Washington report, F. L. Lewton, a specially trained expert, has been engaged. The view of the department is that a cup of coffee is good because of the manner in which it is brewed, rather than from the quality of the bean from which the beverage is made. It will be appreciated by all persons acquainted with the art and mystery of coffee-making that various conditions, apparently trivial in themselves, have to be taken into consideration in producing the beverage.

For instance, in the process of roasting the beans may be more or less damaged by being under or over done, and the flavor of the coffee thus impaired to a corresponding degree. Hence the necessity for ideal conditions in roasting. Again, the effects of water at various temperatures upon the ground coffee and the proper period for infusion will, for the first time in the history of coffee-making, be thoroughly and accurately ascertained.

The retention of caffeine, the active principle of coffee, to which it owes its stimulating effects, and the elimination of the caffeotannic and caffeic acids, which are not only injurious to health, but communicate an unpleasant, bitter taste to the beverage, will be, of course, the principal objects.

MURMURS FROM GROUND.

Strange Sounds Heard for Many Centuries on the Red Sea Borders.

A singular phenomenon occurs on the borders of the Red sea to a place called Nakous, where intermittent underground sounds have been heard for an unknown number of centuries. It is situated about half a mile distant from the shore, whence a long reach of sand ascends rapidly to a height of 300 feet. This reach is about 800 feet wide and resembles an amphitheater, being walked by low rocks.

The sounds coming up from the ground at this place recur at intervals of about an hour. They at first resemble a low murmur, but ere long there is heard a loud knocking, somewhat like the strokes of a bell, which at the end of about five minutes becomes so strong as to agitate the sand. The explanation of this curious phenomenon given by the Arabs is that there is a convent under the ground here and that these monks ring for prayers. So they call it Nakous, which means bell.

The Arabs affirm that the noise so frightens their camels when they hear it as to render them furious. Philosophers attribute the sound to suppressed volcanic action—probably to the bubbling of gas or vapor underground.

Her Mistake.

"Mamma," said a little West side girl yesterday morning, "I can't go to school today. My tooth is achin' awful."

"All right, Lucy," said her mother, "get your jacket and I'll take you to a dentist and have the tooth pulled."

The child hesitated a moment and then said: "Oh, mamma, I made a mistake. It ain't my tooth—it's my head that's achin'."—Kansas City Times.

Willings to Oblige.

The Bride—Oh, Jack! You shouldn't kiss me before all those girls.

The Groom—I'm glad my little wife is so unselfish, and just to please you I'll kiss all those girls first.—Chicago, Daily News.

A Teacher's Testimony.

Hinton, Ky., Nov. 28 (Special).—It has long been claimed that Diabetes is incurable, but Mr. E. J. Thompson, teacher in the Hinton school, has pleasing evidence to the contrary. Mr. Thompson had Diabetes. He took Dodd's Kidney Pills and is cured. In a statement he makes regarding his cure Mr. Thompson says:

"I was troubled with my kidneys for more than two years and was treated by two of the best doctors in this part of the state. They claimed I had Diabetes and there was little to be done for me. Then I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and what they did for me was wonderful. It is entirely owing to Dodd's Kidney Pills that I am now enjoying good health."

Many doctors still maintain that Diabetes is incurable. But Diabetes is a kidney disease and the kidney disease that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure has yet to be discovered.

Miss Whittaker, a prominent club woman of Savannah, Ga., tells how she was entirely cured of ovarian troubles by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I heartily recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a Uterine Tonic and Regulator. I suffered for four years with irregularities and Uterine troubles. No one but those who have experienced this dreadful agony can form any idea of the physical and mental misery those endure who are thus afflicted. Your Vegetable Compound cured me within three months. I was fully restored to health and strength, and now my periods are regular and painless. What a blessing it is to be able to obtain such a remedy when so many doctors fail to help you. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is better than any doctor or medicine I ever had. Very truly yours, Miss EASY WHITTAKER, 604 39th St., W. Savannah, Ga."

No physician in the world has had such a training or such an amount of information at hand to assist in the treatment of all kinds of female ills as Mrs. Pinkham. In her office at Lynn, Mass., she is able to do more for the ailing women of America than the family physician. Any woman, therefore, is responsible for her own trouble who will not take the pains to write to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free.

A letter from another woman showing what was accomplished in her case by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: I am so grateful to you for the help Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given me that I deem it but a small return to write you an expression of my appreciation."

"Many years suffering with weakness, inflammation, and a broken down system, made me more anxious to die than live, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound soon restored my lost strength. Taking the medicine only two weeks produced a radical change, and two months restored me to perfect health. I am now a changed woman, and my friends wonder at the change, it is so marvellous. Sincerely yours, Miss MATTIE HENRY, 429 Green St., Danville, Va."

The testimonials which we are constantly publishing from grateful women prove beyond a doubt the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to conquer female diseases.

STOCK AND CROP.

—J. B. Haggin denies the report that he has sold his Rocho del Paso Stud in California.

—Luke Blackburn, the one time brilliant race horse, sold at Belle Meade dispersal sale for $25.

—R. B. Hutchcraft bought 20 steers, 1,100 lbs., at $3.40, and 8 steers, 1,050 lbs., at $3.00 at Winchester, Monday.

—While a hog may quench his thirst by drinking slop, the much better plan is to give them a good supply of fresh water daily.

—Africander, winner of the Suburban and many other goods races in 1903, has been sold by Sim Deimel to J. B. Haggin, who bred the horse.

—Thomas McClintock & Co., of Millersburg, shipped a load of mules to Atlanta Saturday. They purchased 40 at Cynthiana and Winchester Monday.

—At the Fasig-Tipton sale at Lexington, on Wednesday, Mr. James E. Clay purchased the following horses: Lady Blarney, br m 4, by Imp. Hermence, dam Madam Hindoo, price $125; Spink and Span, br m 3, by First Mate, dam Nellie G., price $275; Katy Did, ch m 17, by Imp. King Ban, dam Kate Duncan, by Imp. Stone Plover, price $400.

Talbot Bros. secured Imp. Kilkenan, br. h, 10, by Ayrshire, dam Maid of Lorn, for $550.

Col. E. F. Clay, Runnymede Stud, bought for $1,600, Imp. Bridgewater, b. h., 8, by Hampton, dam Barmald.

—CYNTHIANA COURT.—About 150 head, medium, to fairly good stuff offered and generally sold. Feeders, weighing from 900 to 1,100 lbs., sold according to quality, from 3 to 3½; yearling steers, 2½ to 3½; heifers, 2½ to 3; calves, $10 to $18 per head; milch cows, $25 to $35; some common and thin stuff carried over. But little trade in either mules or horses.

—On the Louisville breaks, Saturday, 85 hogsheads of Burley tobacco of only fair condition and quality sold at an average of $10.04. For the same week last year 178 hogsheads of new crop Burley sold at an average of $7.62. This indicates a healthy condition of the market, and that farmers will receive a better average price this year than last.

—Geo. Clayton, of Hutchison, Ky., has had the following recent sales of Poland-China hogs: To C. T. Downing, Lexington, 1 male, $20; to W. S. Tuttle, Hutchison, 1 male, $20; Walter Payne, Winchester, 1 male, $20; W. L. Bramblett, Carlisle, 1 male, $25; C. J. Bigstaff, Mt. Sterling, 1 male, $20; Woodford Daniel, Paris, two bred gilts, (extra fine), at $25 and $35. He has plenty more good ones, ranging in price from $2.50 to $500.00.

—WINCHESTER COURT.—About 300 cattle on the market and most of them were sold in small lots. On account of the dry weather and the near approach of the long winter with a scarcity of feed, buyers demanded concessions and prices were fully 25 cents lower than last Court day. The highest price of the day was $3.75 per hundred for a few thousand pound steers, but most of them sold brought $3.00 to $3.50. Heifers sold from $2.00 to $2.50 according to quality; a bunch of nice, yearling steers, weighing 675 lbs., brought $3.30. Trade was slow and prospects for the future are bright.

The Drouth.

The unprecedented drouth throughout Central Kentucky continues unabated. At Carlisle, Winchester, Harrodsburg, Danville, Mt. Sterling and many other towns the situation has become acute. Water is being hauled to Carlisle from this city to operate the electric light plant, and for several weeks the L. and N. has run a water train from this city as far as Livingston to furnish water for engines. At Owensboro water was hauled four miles with which to fight forest fires raging at that point. Throughout Southern Indiana forest fires are raging without means to put them out. There is an abundance of water here from Stoner for all purposes, but cisterns and wells throughout the city are dry in most instances people are using hydrant water.

At length I was induced to try Electric Bitters and the result was miraculous. I improved at once and now I'm completely recovered. For Liver, Kidney, Stomach and Bowel troubles Electric Bitters is the only medicine. Only 50c. It guaranteed by Oberdorfer, the druggist."

Startling Evidence.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds to be unequalled. A recent expression from J. T. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally effective in curing all Lung and Throat troubles, Consumption, Pneumonia and Grip.
